

The Austrian Institute for International Affairs – oiiip and the Department of Political Science of the University of Vienna - IPW cordially invite you to the IPW Lecture on the topic

Gendered Militaries. How Gender Matters in and for Armed Forces

Gender issues have gained increasing importance in and for military institutions. This transformation includes the growing participation of women in the military apparatus itself as well as the integration of gender perspectives into the design of military operations, particularly peacekeeping missions. In light of these changes, this panel discussion addresses the effects of women's presence in the military system and the challenges that gender integration faces regarding equality and anti-discrimination. These issues will be embedded in their broader social context: What are the relations between the armed forces and society and how do they connect to gender relations? What is the role of international organizations like UN, OSCE and NATO as well as international frameworks such as the Women, Peace and Security Agenda in including gender perspectives in the military? Our panelists will discuss these questions on the basis of their in-depth expertise in the research field as well as the policy process.

Date & Time:

Monday, December 3rd 2018
5.30 pm

Venue:

Berggasse 7, 1090 Vienna

Panel:

Megan Bastick (Geneva Centre for the Democratic Control of Armed Forces, DCAF)
Helena Carreiras (ISCTE – University Institute of Lisbon)

Chair:

Saskia Stachowitsch (IPW, Universität Wien | oiiip)

In cooperation with the Federal Ministry of Defense.

Registration:

Please use the online form at www.oiiip.ac.at, alternatively send an e-mail to info@oiiip.ac.at.